DETAILED ACTIONElection/Restrictions

This application contains claims directed to the following patentably distinct species:

Specie I, drawn to a printing-fluid container having an off-axis fluid reservoir configured to hold a free volume of air and printing fluid mixed therein, the printing-fluid reservoir having a substantially planar leading surface; a first fluidic interface on the leading surface extending into the printing-fluid reservoir and a second fluidic interface on the leading surface extending into the printing-fluid reservoir, wherein the first and the second fluidic interfaces are configured to provide bi-directional flow of printing fluid, air and a combination of printing fluid and air into and out of the printing-fluid reservoir (for example, as presently disclosed in claims 1, 3, 7-11, and 42).

Specie II, drawn to a method of and apparatus for supplying printing fluid comprising a reservoir that stores a free volume of printing fluid and air and has an air interface configured to provide bi-directional flow and printing fluid interface configured to provide bi-directional flow; allowing the air to enter the reservoir through the air interface while the printing fluid exits the reservoir through the printing fluid interface in a first mode of operation and allowing the air to exit the reservoir through the air interface while the printing fluid enters the reservoir through the printing fluid interface in a second mode of operation (for example, as presently disclosed in claims 15-32, 34, and 38-49).

Art Unit: 2853

The unique feature of specie I is that each of the two fluid interfaces can establish a bi-directional flow of a combination air and printing fluid. Specie II is different from Specie I in that it requires a printing fluid interface and air interface that separately provide for bidirectional flows of printing fluid and air.

The species are independent or distinct because claims to the different species recite the mutually exclusive characteristics of such species. In addition, these species are not obvious variants of each other based on the current record.

Applicant is required under 35 U.S.C. 121 to elect a single disclosed species for prosecution on the merits to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. Currently, none are generic.

There is an examination and search burden for these patentably distinct species due to their mutually exclusive characteristics. The species require a different field of search (e.g., searching different classes/subclasses or electronic resources, or employing different search queries); and/or the prior art applicable to one species would not likely be applicable to another species; and/or the species are likely to raise different non-prior art issues under 35 U.S.C. 101 and/or 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include (i) an election of a species to be examined even though the requirement may be traversed (37 CFR 1.143) and (ii) identification of the claims encompassing the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered nonresponsive unless accompanied by an election.

The election of the species may be made with or without traverse. To preserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the election of species requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse. Traversal must be presented at the time of election in order to be considered timely. Failure to timely traverse the requirement will result in the loss of right to petition under 37 CFR 1.144. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which of these claims are readable on the elected species.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the species unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) of the other species.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which depend from or otherwise require all the limitations of an allowable generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141.

Art Unit: 2853

Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).
